OPINION SUMMARY

Noah Comeaux (“Employee”) appeals from the Labor and Industrial Relations Commission’s (“Commission”) decision finding that he was disqualified for unemployment benefits. On appeal, Employee contends the Commission erred in finding that he was discharged for misconduct connected with his work.

DECISION REVERSED AND REMANDED.

DIVISION ONE HOLDS: The Commission’s finding that Employee’s actions amounted to misconduct which disqualified him from receiving unemployment benefits was not supported by competent and substantial evidence. Accordingly, we reverse and remand for the entry of an appropriate award.

Opinion by: Nannette A. Baker, J.

Kathianne Knaup Crane, P.J. and Clifford H. Ahrens, J., concur.

Attorney for Appellant: John Ammann

Attorneys for Respondents: Convergys pro se Bart Matanic
