Notwithstanding the above, in accordance with Supreme Court Rule 10, as amended effective

11. I have included the case name and Eastern District number where possible. However, our court often issues Per Curiam opinions. In a Per Curiam opinion, the author of the opinion is not public knowledge. Because I work for Judge Dowd I would be revealing which Per Curiam opinions he authored. As a result, I have removed the case name and Eastern District number from Per Curiam opinions on which I worked. As a practical matter, the same amount of work goes into both Per Curiam opinions and published opinions. We just do not publish the Per Curiam opinions because a published opinion reciting the detailed facts and restating principles of law would have no precedential value. The parties are, however, furnished with a memorandum for their information only, setting forth the reasons for these orders.
