Represented businesses and individual litigants nationally in complex federal and state litigation including matters related to breach of contract, toxic torts, employment discrimination and defective products. Also, represented many local clients with issues pending before municipal courts. Firm acted as class counsel and lead counsel on several cases involving insurance agents with ERISA claims for damages resulting from their classification as independent contractors rather than employees.

Trial Attorney
The Sly James Firm
802 Broadway, 7th Floor
Kansas City, Missouri 64105
June 2002 to April 2005

The Sly James Firm is a personal injury law practice focused on representing people who have been seriously injured by the negligent, reckless, or intentional acts of another. Each case was prepared in line with the firm's philosophy of a team approach and every case goes to trial. I offered capable and sensitive counsel to people who were injured or lost loved ones, as a result of medical malpractice, electric shock, nursing home accidents, defective products and auto accidents. Additionally, I litigated breach of contract and various allegations of discrimination representing both plaintiffs and defendants. I have also litigated cases in Missouri and Kansas in state and federal courts.

Director of Legal Services Division and General Counsel
Missouri Department of Revenue
Harry S Truman State Office Building
301 West High Street Room 670
Jefferson City, MO 65101
April 2005 to May 2006

The Missouri Department of Revenue was created in 1945 by the Missouri Constitution to serve as the central collection agency for all state revenue. The primary duties of the Department are to collect taxes, title and register motor vehicles, and license drivers. The Legal Services Division ensures the Department's compliance with law and internal policies, and manages the Department's legislative efforts. I administered the Office of the General Counsel, Governmental Affairs Bureau, Human Resources Service Division, and Criminal Investigation Bureau. The Legal Services Division has eight offices across the state and serves the Department of Revenue by reviewing the Department's legal issues, statutory duties, regulatory enforcement, rule making and proposed legislation. The General Counsel also has oversight responsibility for approximately 23,000 administrative hearings and trials heard in every county of the state.

General Counsel advises the director and divisions on legal matters relative to the Department, and represents the Department in courts and administrative tribunals.

Human Resources is responsible for personnel matters, training, compliance with employment laws, and for the Department's affirmative action plan and diversity programs.

Criminal Investigation develops information, investigates, and works with law enforcement to assist in the local prosecution of individuals or businesses suspected of violating the laws administered by the Department. Further, the Criminal Investigation Bureau is responsible for creating and maintaining a climate for voluntary tax and motor vehicle compliance by investigating complaints and developing information leading to prosecution of individuals violating these state statutes. The Bureau includes operations in six cities including Jefferson City, Cape Girardeau, St. Joseph, St. Louis, Kansas City, and Springfield.

Governmental Affairs serves as the Department's liaison to the General Assembly. The office develops fiscal and revenue estimates on proposed legislation and monitors the progress of bills through the legislature.

Director

Missouri Department of Labor and Industrial Relations

421 East Dunklin Street

PO Box 504

Jefferson City, MO 65102-0504

May 2006 to September 2007

The Department consists of approximately 1,100 employees who are dedicated public servants providing quality customer service to the current and emerging businesses and workers of Missouri. The Department has an annual budget of $145,000,000. The Department is responsible for administering programs that provide a financial safety net for workers to offset the loss of a job because of injury or layoff, regulate wages for public works and construction projects, promote safe and healthy workplaces, mediate and issue resolutions between certain management and labor groups and enforce Missouri's anti-discriminatory statutes in the areas of housing, employment and public accommodation. The mission is to promote economic security, safe and healthy workplaces, as well as protect wage earners and individuals against discrimination by improving working conditions, enforcing labor and anti-discrimination laws and helping those unemployed, injured on the job or victims of crime. I worked closely with three division directors and two commissions to ensure that the Department as a whole advocates for a budget that is sufficient to fund the Department's mission.

I reported directly to the Governor, utilized performance measures to review progress, and provided information regarding legislation, policy, and programmatic administration.

As part of its mission, the Department adjudicates approximately 85,000 administrative and civil cases annually. Those cases often involve significant policy decisions and range from employment security administrative hearings involving one person to Missouri Supreme Court cases that can affect entire classes of employees or segments of society such as workers or employers. My responsibilities related to the divisions and commissions within the Department were as follows:

The Missouri Division of Employment Security provides payment of unemployment insurance benefits to workers who become unemployed through no fault of their own. Eligible individuals may qualify for up to 26 weeks of unemployment compensation under Missouri's regular program. Special Disaster Unemployment Assistance may be available in some situations for workers who are unable to work as a result of a natural disaster or other catastrophe. To finance unemployment benefits to qualified claimants, the Division collects contributions (taxes) from Missouri employers. Employers are required to report their workers' wages by filing quarterly contribution and wage reports and pay the correct contributions (tax) on their workers' wages in a timely manner.

The Division of Workers' Compensation works with employers and employees regarding workplace injuries and illnesses. Many Missouri employers are required by law to carry workers' compensation insurance for employees. Workers' compensation insurance provides financial assistance to workers injured on the job. The Division helps ensure that those injured workers receive appropriate medical treatment and payment of compensation for lost wages. The Division also provides prompt and equitable resolution of disputes in cases of work-related injuries and occupational diseases. Mediation services are provided to help employers and employees resolve disputes about medical treatment and lost wages.

The Missouri Commission on Human Rights is the state agency charged with enforcing Chapter 213, RSMo. The basic powers and duties of the MCHR are to prevent (through education and outreach) and eliminate (through enforcement) discrimination. Persons who believe that they have been discriminated against because of a factor they cannot change can file a complaint on a form provided by the Commission, but these complaints must be "filed" within 180 days of the latest date of discrimination. The MCHR is only authorized to investigate complaints in employment, public accommodations and housing and only if the reason for the alleged discrimination is on account of that person's protected status of race, color, religion, national origin, ancestry, sex, disability, age (40 - 69) (in employment only) and familial status-families with children under the age of 18 (in housing only).

The Missouri Division of Labor Standards provides information about workplace issues and enforces certain labor laws within the state. The Division can help provide information about worker safety and health, mine safety, complying with laws about child labor, prevailing wage, minimum wage, overtime and dismissal rights, as well as many other general workplace issues.

The Missouri Labor and Industrial Relations Commission acts primarily as the last administrative review for decisions made by the Department in workers' compensation cases, employment security cases, crime victims awards, and disputes acquired through the consolidation of the Board of Mediation into the Commission.

Commissioner
Administrative Hearing Commission
Office of Administration
Harry S Truman State Office Building
301 West High Street Room 640
Jefferson City, MO 65101
October 2007 – present

The Administrative Hearing Commission is a neutral, independent, administrative tribunal. Some of its cases are appeals from decisions of other state agencies. Others are cases that an agency or private person initiates at the Administrative Hearing Commission. Each Commissioner sits independently and acts on behalf of the Commission. The decisions are published by the Commission on its website and by Westlaw and Lexis.

The Administrative Hearing Commission has jurisdiction in over one hundred (100) statutorily specified matters including state tax, professional licensing, Medicaid provider issues, Ethics Commission late filing fee assessments, and Highways and Transportation Commission actions relating to railroads and motor carriers. In calendar year 2003, nearly 2,400 cases were filed at the Administrative Hearing Commission. The Administrative Hearing Commission makes decisions under contested case procedure, usually involving a contested hearing. All decisions are subject to judicial review.

The Administrative Hearing Commission also contracts with other agencies including the Missouri Department of Natural Resources and the Missouri Commission on Human Rights to assist in their decision-making processes. In such cases, the Administrative Hearing Commission conducts the proceedings, but makes only a recommended decision to the agency. The agency makes the final decision.

8. If you are presently an associate circuit judge and have served for two years or longer, attach a list of ten significant cases over which you presided to completion. Set forth the style, cause number, date and name and current address of the primary attorneys participating in each case, identifying the party each attorney represented. Indicate whether bench or jury tried and give a one-three sentence description of each case and its outcome.
- (a) In addition, you may attach a list of cases you tried as an attorney in the last five years before becoming a judge. Set forth the style, cause number, date and jurisdiction and identify who you represented, whether you were first or second chair and the name and address of opposing counsel. State for each case whether bench or jury tried and give a one-three sentence description of each case and its outcome.

Not applicable.

9. Are you able, with or without a reasonable accommodation, to perform the essential functions of a judge including the ability to preside over trials, perform legal research, attend court anywhere in the state, communicate clearly and effectively both orally and in writing, and expeditiously decide issues coming before the court?

Yes.

10. If you have never served as an associate circuit judge or have served for fewer than two years, attach a list of cases you have tried in the last five years. Set forth the style, cause number, date, and court, and identify who you represented, whether you were first or second chair, and the name and address of opposing counsel. Indicate for each case whether bench or jury tried and provide a one to three sentence description of each case and its outcome. If, during any of the last five years, you served as a commissioner or in any other judicial capacity, set forth the dates of same and a description of the duties performed.

As General Counsel and Director of the Legal Services Division for the Missouri Department of Revenue, I was an attorney of record and responsible for approximately 23,000 filed by the department or against it between April 18, 2005 and May 19, 2006. My responsibility included day to day management of litigation and review of all appellate cases argued by the Office of the Attorney General.

11. Have you briefed or argued any case in an appellate court? Yes.

If yes, attach a list showing the citation for each case and describe the extent of your participation in briefing and arguing the case.

Please see attached list.

12. If your experience as an attorney is not in litigation, you may list up to five (5) of your most significant accomplishments in your law career.

I Followed the Law as Director of Labor and Industrial Relations

As Director, I acted on behalf of the Department and could only take those acts specifically authorized under statute. I lived in constant fear of either exceeding my statutory authority or failing to meet statutory mandates. As a result I studied statutes and case law constantly. I took a personal interest in regulations and drafted or revised many of them personally. One case you may have read about is G.R. Restaurant, Inc. et al., v. Missouri Department of Labor and Industrial Relations,¹ 07AC-CC00276. In that case the Department was sued for failing to enforce the new minimum wage statute. I worked tirelessly with the new interim, general counsel and lawyers from the Attorney General's Office to craft the briefs and flush out legal arguments that ultimately carried the day. Being the Director required me to know the law and live within its constraints, but at the same time offered an entirely different perspective on participating in litigation as a potential witness and architect of my defense.

13. Set forth any additional information that demonstrates the quality of your legal work as an attorney.

I began my legal career with a single premise – that each person ought to be treated fairly. It is this principal that ignited my passion for the law and lit the way for me in public service and my professional endeavors. From the first trial in small claims court in Oklahoma for breach of contract against an unscrupulous auto mechanic to my first experience representing children and parents in the juvenal clinic at Tulane Law School, I felt firsthand the importance all litigation has in our society. I have had an opportunity to participate in different types of trials and in variations of appellate practice that have taught me many valuable lessons. The following illustrates the scope of my experience in courtrooms and some particular aspects of practice that demonstrate the quality of my work in trial and appellate work.

I Advocated for Children and Parents in Missouri and Louisiana

Tulane Law School offered me a unique opportunity to litigate in Juvenile Court in New Orleans. While it might seem like a foreign world, it gave me an insight that I needed as a law student, namely that all cases matter. Throughout the course of my senior year, I assisted approximately a dozen parents and children to reunite or separate depending on the case. The most important appellate case that I can share with you from this part of my life is the case State of Louisiana In the Interest of R.A.² RA was a young man of fifteen who by all accounts had some unresolved psychiatric issues. He was confined to a juvenile penal facility after he was found to have tried to set his neighbor's house on fire with some Bic lighters. RA's case came to our attention after he complained that he had served his time, but had not been released from prison.

² State of Louisiana In the Interest of RA, No. 95-CO132, Juvenile Court case number 93-098-08-QD, 1995, Louisiana Court of Appeals, fourth Circuit, case not reported; I represented a juvenile known by court order as R.A.Michael J.

After the case was assigned to me I reviewed the case file and started drafting my first appellate brief – The Application for Supervisory Writ for the Denial of Motion to Recalculate Time Served By the Honorable Lawrence Lagarde, Section “D” Juvenile Court for the Parish of Orleans. The central issue in the brief was whether the juvenile court trial judge abused his discretion in denying R.A. 192 days of time served prior to his incarceration following conviction. I filed the brief and before the case was heard, the Court of Appeals granted the relief I requested and released him from prison. When the news came, I was disturbed that I was not allowed an opportunity to argue the merits of my client's case to the Louisiana Court of Appeals. It was an argument that I had been preparing for weeks. Professor Katner leaned over and told me then what rings true now more than ever, “I hope you can win all your cases on the brief.”

I share this point because I have tried to perfect my writing to be concise, correct and persuasive in every communication with a court.

I Worked at the Missouri Supreme Court for More Than Three Years

The summer after my first year of law school I began clerking for Judge Duane Benton at the Missouri Supreme Court as a summer extern. I continued to clerk as an extern throughout law school until I became a permanent member of the staff in 1995 after graduation. Under Judge Benton's guidance and mentoring, I developed an interest in taxation and enrolled in and completed the LLM curriculum at Washington University. During that time, I had an amazing opportunity to assist in drafting case opinions and transfer memos. I attended oral arguments and did everything I could to learn the law and understand the appellate process. While I was at the Court, I saw cases based on good and bad facts, won and lost on procedural missteps and jurisdictional mistakes. Until now, that is the only position I have held that allowed me the luxury of time to review and research all manner of issues.

I Litigated in Both State and Federal Courts All Around

I left the Court in August 1998 to work with Humphrey Farrington & McClain in Independence, Missouri, on perhaps the most important tobacco litigation brought in a Missouri trial Court.³ The Attorney General brought the case through a number of the state's most prominent trial lawyers. Some of the assignments that I had on this case included the examination of tobacco companies' privilege logs, document review, drafting various responses to discovery and assistance in the preparation and drafting of pleadings. That litigation concluded with a larger than expected settlement for the state, but from it, I learned about state and federal discovery, privileges, evidence, depositions, and many other aspects of complex litigation.

After that, I worked on a series of ERISA class actions, breach of contract, promissory estoppel, more tobacco, asbestos, and race discrimination cases. None of these cases ever went to trial, but each lasted well over a year, involved regional and nationally recognized counsel and either resulted in a six or seven figure settlement or was dismissed on summary judgment.

The assignments I received during my three years at the firm grew in responsibility and I was granted greater degrees of control until I was finally placed in charge of most of the litigation on my docket. At the time I was delighted to participate in all levels of what I considered to be high stake's litigation. I learned a lot from my experience litigating against some of the very best lawyers. I spent months on various document productions around the country. I deposed more than a hundred fact witnesses and experts and even the CEOs of Blockbuster and Sprint.

All of that experience taught me how to comport myself during various discovery phases, in trial and on appeal. I litigated issues such as the crime fraud exception to the attorney client privilege, statutory interpretation of state and federal statutes, numerous evidentiary issues, and lots of sanctions motions. I did so in cases with millions of dollars at stake. That litigation prepared me well for the other litigation that I have been involved with despite the fact that it all has not been as contentious or for extraordinary sums.

³ State of Missouri v. Phillip Morris et al., 1998, before Judge Jimmy Edwards 22nd Circuit Court of St. Louis.

Robert Dean v. Charles Goodin and Globe Life et al., exemplifies the quality of work both as a litigator and as an advocate on appeal.⁴ Mr. Dean was the most successful insurance agent in the history of Globe Life Insurance Company. After decades of service, Dean decided to leave Globe. Globe then converted his book of insurance business to leads for its other agents and then refused to pay his commissions due to Mr. Dean. Mr. Dean went into bankruptcy and my firm was retained by both the bankruptcy trustee and Mr. Dean. The litigation started in 1993 and concluded after a final appeal to the Oklahoma Supreme Court almost 10 years later. I tried that case with Greg Leyh in Oklahoma City to a six figure verdict. We also won our motion for attorney fees and costs of approximately $139,000. Despite the jury's quick and unanimous verdict, Globe appealed its loss. Mr. Dean appealed the dismissal of his tort claim. I briefed the case through the Court of Appeals and the Writ to the Oklahoma Supreme Court and it was decided in favor of the verdict but excluded the tort claim plaintiff hoped to reclaim.⁵

As a young lawyer, I took every opportunity to argue before a court whether for plaintiffs or defendants. That includes arguments in Missouri, Oklahoma, and Kansas state courts as well as federal courts in Ohio, Oklahoma, Missouri, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Kansas. In addition to the types of cases listed here, I also represented Missouri litigants in workers' compensation, municipal, family, condemnation, landlord tenant and administrative law cases as well as drafted numerous contracts, wills and trusts and business entity formation documents.

I Litigated in Kansas City

In the summer of 2002, I joined Sly James at a new firm he created. Our practice was primarily focused in Missouri and Kansas representing injured people and in a number of cases including businesses in breach of contract and other business related issues. I worked on breach of contract, medical malpractice, discrimination, predatory lending, tortious interference, auto accidents, and a host of other personal injury cases. Two cases Kivon Hopkins et al. v. Stock Transportation et al.,⁶ 02CV223464 and Nathaniel Pipkin v.

4 Robert E. Dean v. Globe Life Insurance Co., No. CJ-1993-4413, Oklahoma County District Court; before the Honorable Bryan C. Dixon. Opposing counsel included Robert Smith & John Edwards.

5 Robert E. Dean and Estate, of Robert Dean v. Globe Life and Accident Insurance Co., No. DF-95840 consolidated with 95847, Oklahoma Supreme Court; mandate issued June 12, 2003. Robert Smith & John Edwards.

6 Judge Justine Del Muro approved the minor settlement agreement. Opposing counsel included John Franke and James Conkright.

Marc A. Holcomb et al.,⁷ 03CV223943 exemplify the quality of work I performed in that both were unique legal theories and required me to master new areas of law. In Hopkins a five year old suffered post traumatic stress after his bus driver left him on the corner of a busy urban intersection instead of taking him to school. Similarly, in Pipkin an elderly gentleman was swindled out of tens of thousands of dollars through predatory lending practices. For young Kivon Hopkins, I obtained a settlement by engaging in intense discovery and proving that every person--no matter their stature or age--has an inherent value. The defendant's initial offer after weeks of discovery was for alternate transportation for the boy to and from school. Ultimately, the young man ended up with a valuable annuity.

In the case of Pipkin I unraveled a long and spotty paper trail in order to show that a repairman acted in collusion with a national banking representative to inflate the value of the gentleman's home and income with the effected intent of not only perpetuating a fraud in the bank, but also depriving the gentleman of the proceeds of the loan. Fortunately, his house and lifestyle were saved. At the time, no one knew the depth of the sub-prime market or that it would turn into an epidemic as result of some of these very same practices. I mention these cases because of the unconventional claims I had to bring to ensure a remedy that fit my clients' needs and my willingness to not shy away from legal issues that are complex and generally confusing even after study.

Additionally, I tried two other interesting cases Karen Pendergrass v. Missouri Highway & Transportation Commission,⁸ 03CV209714 and Marvel Wilson v. Terry Brooks et al.,⁹ that may lend further perspective to my litigation background. Pendergrass was a young lady, who drove her car over the I-670 viaduct into Kansas during a rain storm and encountered pooling water on the highway which caused her to lose control of her vehicle and crash. I was co-counsel with Scott Shachtman of The Sly James Firm. Judge Dean presided over the jury trial in Jackson County. The jury returned a defense verdict. Scott and I prepared for ever aspect of that trial. We drafted trial briefs, jury instructions, selected the jury, argued the case and polled the jury after our loss.

⁷ Judge Ann Mesle was the judge at disposition and opposing counsel included Michael Sagen, Russell Purvis, and Leonard Wagnor.

⁸ Zachary Cartwright was the state's lawyer.

⁹ Daniel Kelly was the homeowner's lawyer.

In the Wilson trial, however, I drafted all of the pleading and discovery and was the attorney of record at the bench trial before Judge Margaret L. Sauer in Jackson County. It was the first housing discrimination case for the firm. My client won at trial. Little did I know that the cases I studied would be so important later in my career as the Director of the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations and as a Commissioner with the Administrative Hearing Commission.

I Litigated on Behalf of the Department of Revenue as General Counsel

In April of 2005 I became the General Counsel for the Department of Revenue for the State of Missouri. In this role I relied on my years of litigation, my LL.M. in taxation, and extra judicial management experience to guide the Department's approximately 23,000 cases through administrative review at the Administrative Hearing Commission, trial court prosecution and appellate review depending on the type of case. There were many interesting and complicated tax and regulatory issues. Three areas of cases best show the quality of work I performed at the Department.

First, the State had not been pursuing tax debt in probate court. I established a procedure for lawyers at the Department to follow and started prosecution of these cases state-wide utilizing the same manpower then existing. Within the first year, the state had recouped close to a million dollars that otherwise would have gone uncollected. I read the statute and applied existing law.

Second, MCI was a multinational conglomerate that found itself the subject of a multistate tax audit. I headed the Missouri team that reviewed that audit and conducted additional research and ultimately negotiated a settlement for millions more with MCI and other states. I am not a bankruptcy attorney, but I have an appreciation for code driven areas of law such as taxation, environmental law, probate, and now bankruptcy.

Finally, the Department performs many functions designed to ensure public safety through regulatory oversight of banking institutions to used car dealers. As a good steward of the State's resources, I had to make the hard decisions of which cases to prosecute and in what manner.

I was hands-on and participated in each and every step of the appellate process. Although I did not get to litigate them before the Supreme Court, I read all the briefs and made suggestions as to substance and style. In other cases I assembled and directed trial teams to enforce the regulations designed to protect the public. In order to do so, I worked with witnesses, lawyers and experts to craft a trial strategy that would in the proper case allow the department to discipline those who contravened the public good. My total staff consisted of 167 people of whom 35 were lawyers in four offices around the state.

As a Commissioner I have issued over 100 Decisions

Decisions issued by the Commission include findings of fact and conclusions of law based upon the Commissioners determination of the evidence presented in a contested case hearing. The hearings utilize the fundamental rules of evidence and procedures set forth in Revised Statutes of Missouri Chapters 621 and 536 as well as numerous Rules of Civil Procedure. I spent my first three weeks hearing cases on a few of the 100 statutes that the Commission has jurisdiction over and then spent the next two weeks at the National Judicial College learning from sitting and retired federal judges and sitting state appellate courts how to conduct a fair hearing. That experience was invaluable. It armed me with guidance in the law that ensures due process in hearings. It also provided me with the framework to make tough decisions with confidence. Recently I have been invited back as a group leader and anticipate returning to Reno to function in that capacity in April of 2009.

The cases we hear generally allow or bar a person or business from engaging in commerce and therefore sit at the root of the American Dream of using one's own industry to his or her betterment as envisioned in Article 2 Section 3 of the Missouri Constitution. In addition to the cases related to the regulation of licensed employment, the commission hears all of the complaints challenging permits issued by the Department of Natural Resources, complaints of invidious discrimination as recognized under the Missouri Human Rights Act and contested fee disputes between the department of health and providers. Accordingly, I am spending many extra hours reviewing case files, statutes, case law, and conducting hearings to ensure that the hearings are not just impartial, efficient, and fair to the litigants. I have issued over sixty decisions so far and they are published on Westlaw, Lexis, and the Administrative Hearing Commission's website.¹⁰ I know how to conduct a fair trial and provide each litigant every conceivable opportunity to present his or her case because even though the case may ultimately turn on the facts and law more so than a credibility determination, the requirements of due process are the primary protections of our rights.

My work as a Commissioner has also allowed me to review briefs that are submitted in the vast majority of cases. Those briefs are very similar to appellate briefs in that legal and factual arguments are supplied, but differ in that they argue facts necessary to reach the legal determination.

14. Have you ever been convicted of a misdemeanor or felony? No.

If yes, provide details, including the style of the case, cause number, name of the jurisdiction, and date of conviction:

15. Have you ever been sued by a client or been a party to any other litigation, other than as guardian ad litem, plaintiff ad litem or defendant ad litem?

Yes, I have been a litigant, but I have not been sued by a client.

If yes, provide details, including the style of the case, cause number, name of the jurisdiction and the approximate year in which such litigation was commenced and in which it was terminated:

Falcon Contracting v. Nimrod Chapel, Jr., case number 03MC202973, which was filed in the 16th Judicial Circuit as a mechanics lien on September 29, 2003. Casenet reports that the case was concluded “by other final disposition.”

The lien arose as a result of a complaint I made to Falcon Contracting who was at the time installing a roof on my home. The contract we signed required that Falcon Contracting replace rotten wood before installing the roof, but I complained when I saw that the roof was sagging and witnessed rotten wood being covered up by the contractor. The contractor failed to perfect its lien.

Additionally, I have been sued on numerous occasions in my official capacity as Director of the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations and as a Commissioner with the Administrative Hearing Commission. I can supplement this answer with those case citations upon request.

16. Have you ever been disciplined or cited for breach of ethics or professional conduct by a court or by any bar association or committee thereof? No.

If yes, provide details:

17. Have you ever been held in contempt of court? No.

If yes, provide details:

18. If you are or were a member of the Judiciary of the State of Missouri, please state:

- (a) Whether an order of reprimand, removal, retirement, suspension or other disciplinary action has ever been entered against you by the Supreme Court of Missouri for breach of the Code of Judicial Conduct or the Canons of Judicial Conduct?

If yes, state the nature of such breach, the date discipline was imposed and the exact nature and duration of the discipline imposed:

- (b) Whether a reprimand or admonishment has ever been entered against you by the Commission on Retirement, Removal and Discipline for any of the causes specified in Rule 12.07 of the Supreme Court Rules Governing the Judiciary.

If yes, provide details including date the order was entered, the date of your consent, and a description of the conduct you were ordered to cease and desist:

- (c) Whether, to your knowledge, you have been a subject of a complaint and investigation by the Commission on Retirement, Removal and Discipline, which did not result in any action by the Commission? If yes, provide details:

Not applicable.

19. To your knowledge, have you been investigated by a court or by any bar association or committee thereof for breach of ethics or professional conduct?

No.

If yes, provide details:

20. List all bar associations and other professional societies, of which you are a member, with any offices held and dates:

27. State any additional information you deem relevant:

I believe that a fair and independent judiciary is essential to a free democracy. Thank you for the opportunity to provide the information in this application and to speak with you. I thought it appropriate to share another aspect of my desire to serve the state as a Jackson County judge.

Since I moved to Kansas City in August of 1998, I have lived in Brookside, Midtown and now the Northeast and in the process made our city my home. And I made that decision because I like the people, the city's rich history, its architecture, geographical location and the city's spirit. Before I moved here, I made more than 20 visits. I believe that here is where I can do the most good as a citizen, lawyer and public servant. While I practiced law here I had lots of cases that took me across the nation and region. America has many places and Missouri has good people living elsewhere, but my decision to be a Kansas Citian has not wavered. Even so, Kansas City is not perfect and I committed years ago to make it a more perfect place.

I am and have been involved in the city working with several civic and professional groups including Boy Scouts of America (as a Scoutmaster for Friendship Village on Paseo), NAACP (as a Young Adult Committee Chair), Kansas City Metropolitan Bar Association (as a Member of the Young Lawyers Council and representative to the ABA), Jackson County Bar Association (as an active member), University of Missouri Extension Council, and Grace Baptist Church to name a few. I have also held a variety of public service leadership positions such as being an elected official for four years with the University of Missouri Extension Council (where I concluded my term as President) and finally being an appointed member of the Governor's cabinet for the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations and an Administrative Hearing Commissioner from Kansas City.

All of my involvement has given me indepth perspective into Kansas City. I have seen the change firsthand. When my then Senator Charlie Wheeler took me through the Senate confirmation process, I literally had Kansas City's elder statesman endorsing me, a member of the next generation for public service. Sixty years prior, the implications of race, economics and the law would have scuttled my desire and thus my ability to serve in many public capacities. So, it was a proud moment for my family and I to see the Kansas City Star describe the appointment of me as one of Kansas City's own. And again in 2007 when my Senator Jolie Justice sat with me offering her endorsement of my senate confirmation for my current position as a Commissioner. I was also proud, but this time for an additional reason - because we entered the Missouri Bar's Leadership Academy at its inception as representatives of the potential women and minorities had for service and leadership. Our goal was to serve Missouri through our legal training and ask the same of others. Even now, when I look at the photo from my Senate confirmation, it speaks to the direction that Kansas City is going, the people who live here and a growing spirit for public service. It has been an honor and a privilege to serve in the roles I have held and I want to continue as a Jackson County judge.

At the Kansas City Metropolitan Bar Association's holiday party, a friend, lawyer and former state leader asked me if it is hard living here in Kansas City and working in another place and how that was going. While there have been roommate troubles, issues affecting the rehab of my 100 year old house, fluctuating gas costs, and just plain old missing my friends and familiar places being at my disposal, I wouldn't give up on my family's future here in Kansas City. Like many of our state legislators, statewide elected officials and even the majority of the Missouri Supreme Court judges, I rent a very modest place there in Jefferson City and dutifully report to work during the week happy to serve, but mindful of life back home in Kansas City waiting on me to conclude my workweek. For my family, it has required changes that include sharing our house in Kansas City, at times staying with relatives in Jefferson City, and improving the family cars for safer travel. But it has also allowed time for needed repairs to the drafty construction site I as a bachelor and now family man have called home since 2003, in hopes of creating a better place for the wife and family I have long dreamt of – my wife, Denise, and son, Nim. They are a reality now, but the house leaves something to be desired and quite a few projects for years to come. Kansas City is not just my home, it is where I fell in love and my dreams have become reality. That is not to say that a break-in, numerous thefts, random vandalism, disrespectful roommates, an occasional mean neighbor, and high levels of crime in my neighborhood have not all been challenging on various levels, but home is not always a rose garden either.

I guess my experiences early in my career have helped me and my young family adapt to what would otherwise be a more serious proposition – life on the road splitting family for profession. After graduating from law school at Tulane, I immediately started working at the Missouri Supreme Court for Judge Benton and entered into the Tax LL.M. program at Washington University in St. Louis. I used to work during the day and study in the evening (sometimes all night) before and after I attended classes in St. Louis. I learned then that sometimes, there are sacrifices that you make to achieve your goals. I also quickly figured out that I needed to turn the four year program into two – which I did.

In August of 1998 after completing my LL.M. in Tax and completing my obligations to the Court, I moved to Kansas City and started working on the largest tobacco case in the state's history without missing a single work day between jobs. That case and many after it kept me on the road and in the air to different cities sometime for an entire week and often three to four days split between cities. Perhaps the worst feeling was that of being disengaged. It is a term I concocted to describe what happens when people are too busy working and not involved in their community. I had that feeling until I incorporated other people in my life through service. After about a year I was a Scout Master at Friendship Village, working in the Kansas City Metropolitan Bar Association and Jackson County Bar Association, and buying my first home. From there, my life began to come together. I made friends, took on causes, and became engaged – metaphorically and literally. Now as a husband and father, I am still on the road between home and Jefferson City splitting time between family and profession but taking with me the stability that only my wife Denise can give, and the selfless love of my young son. I have roots in this city of fountains and I am fully engaged.

I talk regularly with many leaders in our city, keep in touch with friends and past clients, and attend civic, cultural and social events including dinners and fundraisers for worthy causes. My wife and I still contribute time and tithe to our church Grace Baptist Church of Kansas City, Missouri. You may remember hearing from my pastor and members of my congregation. Denise and I are woven into the community in different ways. She is still an active alumni with the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce Centurions' (young leaders program) as well as an active volunteer assisting Carver Bible College and Seminary in planning and fundraising activities. Add to that selecting paint and fixtures for my weekend rehab projects that drive us happily crazy with disruptions of its own. Just as our home is in the process of being rehabbed, so is our family - as we try to maintain a schedule around the travel back and forth to work, shared living quarters in my home, various contractor schedules, and especially our desire to be even more involved than we were before I started working out of town.

I started off thanking you for the opportunity to both apply and be considered, and now have to apologize for being so long winded in doing so. I want each of you to know that Kansas City is my home. I love the city and the people in it. It would be my privilege to work on a more direct basis for those who I claim as my own. I hope that you know my depth of commitment to Kansas City and can imagine with me the potential I have for further improvement. People like you who have inspired me to service, provided examples of hard work and dedication, and made this place my home. Thank you for your consideration.

By my signature to this application, I authorize: (1) the Commission by its chairperson to obtain relevant information, including but not limited to documents, records and files with respect to my medical, police or disciplinary records, and (2) the Commission and its members to obtain additional relevant information regarding my qualifications as well as the accuracy of my responses to the questions on this application, with the understanding that the information described in (1) and (2) above is available only to the members of the Seventh Circuit Judicial Commission. Notwithstanding the above, in accordance with Supreme Court Rule 10, as amended effective February 29, 2008, if I am one of the three nominees listed on the certificate of nomination sent to the Governor, I authorize the Commission to send a complete copy of this application to the Governor and publicly release a copy of the application with personal and confidential information redacted as identified on the cover page of this application.

I hereby certify that all my statements as made above are correct, and that if I am appointed to the office of Circuit Judge of Jackson County, Missouri, I will accept the appointment, qualify, and promptly enter upon the performance of the duties of that office.

Citation: State of Louisiana In the Interest of R.A., No. 95-CO132, Juvenile Court case number 93-098-08-QD, 1995, Louisiana Court of Appeals, fourth Circuit.

Description on Participation:

I Advocated for Children

Tulane Law School offered me a unique opportunity to litigate in Juvenile Court in New Orleans. While it might seem like a foreign world, it gave me an insight that I needed as a law student, namely that all cases matter. Throughout the course of my senior year, I assisted approximately a dozen parents and children to reunite or separate depending on the case. The most important appellate case that I can share with you from this part of my life is the case State of Louisiana In the Interest of R.A.¹ RA was a young man of fifteen who by all accounts had some unresolved psychiatric issues. He was confined to a juvenile penal facility after he was found to have tried to set his neighbor's house on fire with some Bic lighters. RA's case came to our attention after he complained that he had served his time, but had not been released from prison.

After the case was assigned to me I reviewed the case file and started drafting my first appellate brief – The Application for Supervisory Writ for the Denial of Motion to Recalculate Time Served By the Honorable Lawrence Lagarde, Section "D" Juvenile Court for the Parish of Orleans. The central issue in the brief was whether the juvenile court trial judge abused his discretion in denying R.A. 192 days of time served prior to his incarnation following conviction. I filed the brief and before the case was heard, the Court of Appeals granted the relief I requested and released him from prison. When the news came, I was disturbed that I was not allowed an opportunity to argue the merits of my client's case to the Louisiana Court of Appeals. It was an argument that I had been preparing for weeks. Professor Katner leaned over and told me then what rings true now more than ever, "I hope you can win all your cases on the brief." I share this point because I have tried to perfect my writing to be concise, correct and persuasive in every communication with a court.

Description of Participation:

The Dean case involved contentious litigation between a best selling agent of an insurance company and his employer. It lasted for nearly 10 years. My issues were appealed to the appellate courts during the four years I worked on the case as it finally made its way to trial and then up on appeal. In those instances, I drafted the briefs. Plaintiff was successful at trial and the verdict was upheld on appeal.
