Missouri's 13th Judicial Circuit Court is comprised of Boone County and Callaway County.

We are the "heart" of Missouri's circuit court system!

The Boone County Courthouse is located in downtown Columbia.

The Callaway County Courthouse is located in downtown Fulton.

Our Courthouses are busy places!

In 2022 –

79,333 people entered the Boone County Courthouse.

We saw a 2.5% increase in traffic from 2021.

That is an average of 8 additional people each day in the Courthouse.

53,314 people entered the Callaway County Courthouse.

We saw a huge 12.3% increase in traffic from 2021.

That is an average of 25 additional people each day in the Courthouse.

Note: The Callaway Courthouse is a multi-use facility and contains several county offices not related to court functions, it is possible not all of this increase in traffic was due to increased court activities.

2022 Notable Achievements

A huge achievement for 2022 was the Missouri Supreme Court announcing that the 13th Circuit had won the Daniel J. O'Toole Award.

Named for the late judge who first chaired the state's Time Standards Monitoring Committee, the O'Toole Award recognizes a circuit court's excellence in service and delivering timely justice to the public.

The 13th Circuit had an average clearance rate of approximately 101.6 percent, meaning it closed more cases in fiscal 2022 than were filed during the same time frame. This is the first time the 13th circuit has received the O'Toole Award.

Other Notable Achievements/Improvements for 2022:

- Updated the technology in the Boone 3 West Courtroom and Boone 2 South Courtroom to include larger high definition television screens, high definition cameras, and additional microphones. Throughout COVID and its aftermath, the 13th Circuit continues to be a leader in the use of courtroom technology to keep dockets moving and getting cases resolved.
- We updated our job posting template to make open positions more enticing by highlighting the many job benefits.
- We updated our employee award process from annual to quarterly to make it easier to recognize members of our work family who are superstars at what they do.
- Each department created a central computer document repository of important electronic files, so the best versions of forms and checklists could be shared and not lost in people's personal computer folders.

JUDGES AND COMMISSIONERS OF THE 13TH CIRCUIT

The 13th Judicial Circuit presently has 10 elected judges and 2 commissioners. These judges and commissioners come from a variety of legal backgrounds that add to the collective depth of experience and insights offered in our court system.

The number of circuit judges in each circuit is set by the legislature. Our four circuit judges are elected by constituents of both Boone and Callaway counties, and each serves a six-year term. Circuit judges are the only judges who have authority to hear felony criminal cases (murder, rape, arson, etc) as well as complex civil cases where the damage claimed is over $25,000. (breach of contract, medical malpractice, wrongful death, etc)

The number of associate circuit judges is based on the population of each county, and are elected by the constituents of each county. Boone County has four associate circuit judges and Callaway County has two associate circuit judges, all serving four-year terms. Associate judges hear cases in family law, juvenile, probate, misdemeanor criminal cases, and felony criminal cases up to the preliminary hearing.

Article V of the Missouri Constitution specifies that a circuit judge must meet the following qualifications:

- At least 30 years old,
- Licensed to practice law in Missouri,
- US citizen for at least 10 years,
- A qualified voter of the state for 3 years,
- A resident of the circuit the judge serves for at least 1 year.

An associate just must be:

- At least 25 years old,
- Licensed to practice law in Missouri,
- A qualified voter of the state,
- A resident of the county in which the judge serves.

The family court commissioner and treatment court commissioner are appointed by the Court en Banc, and each serve four-year terms. The family court commissioner presides over family court matters (domestic relations and juvenile cases), and the treatment court commissioner presides over the circuit's treatment courts (dwi court, drug court, etc). Commissioners have the authority to hear cases and make decisions that a judge does, but their decisions then must be reviewed by a judge as only a judge can issue a judgment.

Each judge and commissioner sit in a division. Judges and commissioners are often referred to by their division. In the 13th Circuit, divisions I, II, III and IV are presided over by circuit judges. Divisions V, IX, X and XI are presided over by Boone County associate circuit judges; Divisions VI and VII are presided over by Callaway County associate circuit judges. Division VIII is the family court commissioner. Division XII is the treatment court commissioner.

There is a presiding judge who is elected by the judges of the 13th Circuit. The presiding judge is the chief administrative officer over all other divisions. Among other things, the presiding judge is responsible for:

- presiding over Court en Banc meetings,

Missouri's Judicial Circuit System

Missouri's judicial system is a separate and independent branch of state government, established through Article V of the Constitution of the State of Missouri.

Missouri is presently divided into forty-six separate judicial circuits. There is a court in every county of Missouri, and most circuits are comprised of multiple county courts. The 13th Circuit covers Boone and Callaway counties.

Missouri circuit courts are courts of original civil and criminal jurisdiction. That means that cases usually begin in the county courts, that this is the level where trials occur.

Missouri's 46 Judicial Circuits and 3 Appellate Districts

If necessary, someone could appeal a circuit court ruling to one of the three Missouri appellate courts for a review –

Western District, Eastern District, or Southern District.

The appropriate appellate court is determined by the circuit court location. We in the 13th Circuit are under the umbrella of the Western District Court of Appeals.

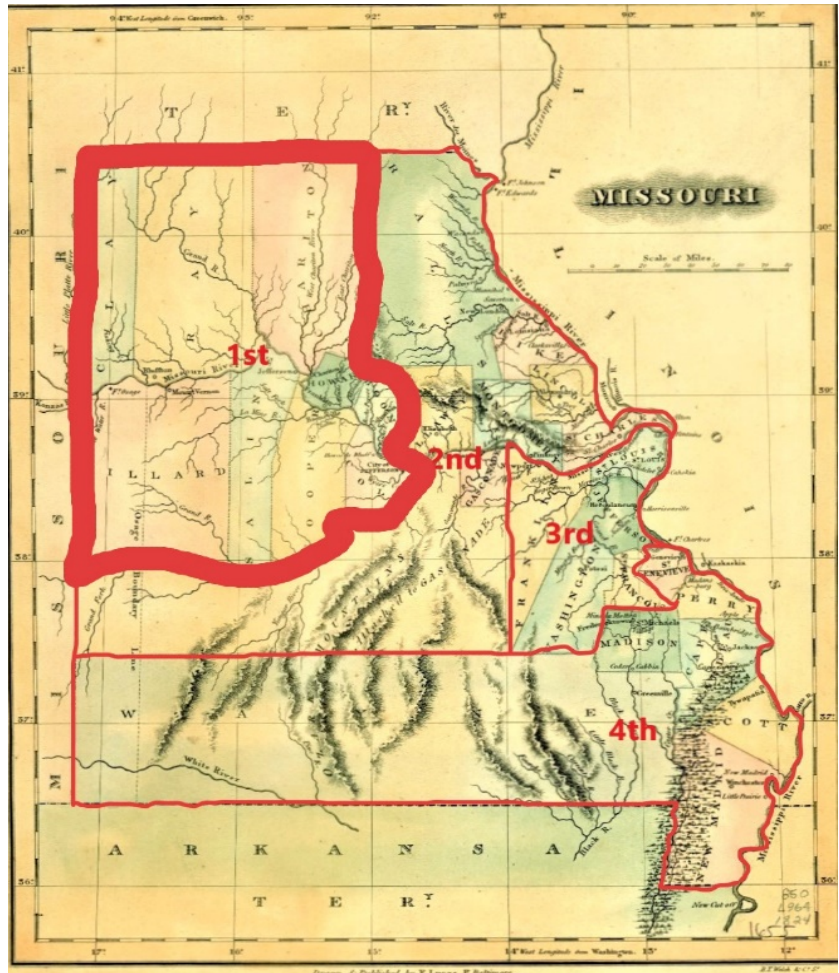

Then from there, the case could go to the Missouri Supreme Court. Located in Jefferson City, Missouri, it is the highest court in the state.

History of the Court in Boone County

When Missouri became a state in 1821, Boone County was part of the 1st Circuit covering the North West quarter of the state. At that time, the 1st Circuit included Boone, Howard, Chariton, Ray, Clay, Lillard (now Lafayette), Saline, Cooper, and Cole Counties.

Starting in 1818, the Boone County seat was the town of Smithton. Columbia was designated county seat when Missouri was granted statehood in 1821.

The Honorable David Todd, having served as Territorial Judge since 1817, became the first Circuit Judge over Boone County.

FUN FACT:

Boone County's first Circuit Judge David Todd was a favorite uncle of Mary Todd, who married Abraham Lincoln in 1842. A young Mary often visited Columbia during Summers to spend time with Judge Todd's six daughters and three sons.

According to tradition, the first circuit courts were held outdoors in Summer and in private homes during Winter.

The first Boone County courthouse was constructed in 1828. It was a 40-foot by 40-foot square two-story brick building, and would be the first of three courthouses to be built in Columbia. No known picture or drawing of this building survives.

On February 9, 1833, the judicial circuits were redrawn and the 1st Circuit of Missouri now consisted of Boone, Callaway, Randolph, Howard, Monroe, Cole, Morgan, and Cooper. This was the first date that Boone and Callaway would be in the same circuit together.

In 1839, the judicial circuits were redrawn and the 2nd Circuit of Missouri now consisted of Boone, Callaway, Randolph, and Howard Counties.

In 1845, the new counties of Macon and Audrain joined in with Boone, Callaway, Randolph, and Howard to make a larger 2nd Circuit.

The second Boone County Courthouse was built in 1847, and measured 84 feet by 51 feet. Designed by William Jewell, the court appropriated $15,000 for the building.

The four thirty-foot columns that presently stand alone on Walnut and 8th Street are all that remain of the second courthouse. Those courthouse columns align perfectly with the University of Missouri's old Academic Building columns located in the Francis Quadrangle.

In 1872, the 2nd Circuit was split again and went back to being Boone, Callaway, Randolph, and Howard Counties.

In 1892, Boone, Callaway, Randolph, and Howard Counties were re-designated the 9th Circuit.

In 1906, construction started on the third Boone County courthouse. The original design featured a taller dome which was ultimately lowered to the more rounded dome we have today. Completed in 1909 at an estimated cost of $100,000, this building remains the front of the present courthouse today.

In 1909, the 9th circuit was split and Boone and Callaway were designated as the new 34th Circuit. This was the first time that a circuit contained only Boone and Callaway Counties.

On May 2, 1992, a $7 million addition and courthouse renovation were completed. This included construction of a courthouse annex connected to the original courthouse via a glass walkway. The southern-facing front side remained unchanged, and the annex incorporated the property behind the courthouse which had previously been the County Jail.

In 2008, the courthouse was again renovated and expanded adding two additional floors to the courthouse annex. A feature of this renovation was the addition of a state-of-the-art technology courtroom, which was equipped with multiple tv screens, computers on attorney tables, document scanner, and a high definition media camera – amenities that would 15 years later become essential parts of a modern remote-video-capable courtroom space.

The Boone County Courthouse is the administrative head of the 13th Circuit. It incorporates the office space for the Presiding Judge, Court Administrator and Judges Office staff, Jury Supervisor, and court reporters.

History of the Court in Callaway County

When Missouri became a state in 1821, Callaway County was part of the 2nd Circuit covering the North East quarter of the state as well as a long swath south of the Missouri River.

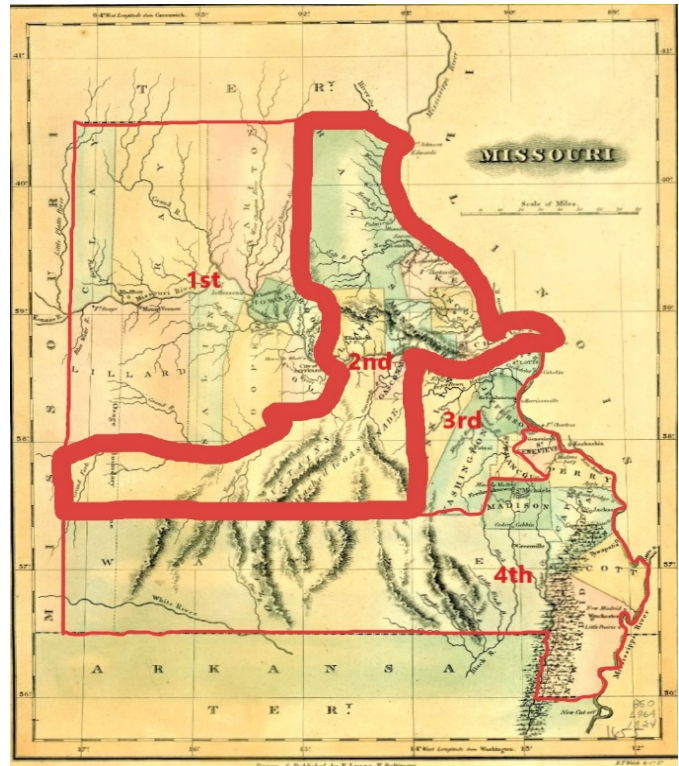

In 1821, the new town of Elizabeth was chosen to be the county seat. Established on 100 acres at “the west end of the Prairie commonly known by the name of Ham’s Prairie”, the town of Elizabeth (named after the local tavern owner’s wife) no longer exists today.

The Honorable Rufus Pettibone served as the first Circuit Judge over Callaway County. In May 1823, Pettibone was appointed by Governor Alexander McNair to the Supreme Court of Missouri.

A look at the 1821 Missouri county map helps explain the odd shape of the 2nd Circuit. South of the Missouri River was a large area of unsurveyed territory that was considered part of Gasconade County.

The town of Volney became the county seat of Callaway County in 1825. At that time, the county erected a log building to serve as the county courthouse. This log building was the first official courthouse in what is now the 13th Judicial Circuit.

Volney was renamed the next year to honor the inventor of the steamboat, Robert Fulton.

In 1828, a second courthouse was completed in Callaway County. This time the courthouse was made out of brick and cost $1,300. It was described as a two story, 36-foot by 36-foot square building, with the courtroom on the first floor and offices on the second. No known drawing of the building has survived.

On February 9, 1833, the judicial circuits were redrawn and the 1st Circuit of Missouri now consisted of Callaway, Boone, Randolph, Howard, Monroe, Cole, Morgan, and Cooper. This was the first date that Boone and Callaway would be in the same circuit together.

In 1839, the judicial circuits were redrawn and the 2nd Circuit of Missouri now consisted of Callaway, Boone, Randolph, and Howard Counties.

In 1845, the new counties of Macon and Audrain joined in with Callaway, Boone, Randolph, and Howard to make a larger 2nd Circuit.

The third Callaway County Courthouse was built in 1856 for $17,850. Local legend is that the Callaway County courthouse was designed with six columns because the Boone County courthouse and Audrain County courthouse both only had four columns.

The Callaway Courthouse underwent an extensive remodel in 1885 adding the mansard roof and reshaping the bell tower.

The 1885 renovation was designed and overseen by local architect M. F. Bell. The mansard roof, window shape, and other details of this design matches similar features in other Bell buildings, notably the Palace Hotel which sits catty-corner to the courthouse.

In 1892, Boone, Callaway, Randolph, and Howard Counties were re-numbered to be the 9th Circuit.

In 1909, Boone and Callaway were split off to form the new 34th Circuit. This was the first time that a judicial circuit was only Boone and Callaway Counties.

The fourth and current courthouse was completed in December 1939 at a total cost of $227,000. The previous courthouse was torn down in 1938 to make way for the more modern three-story structure which included the county jail and most of the other county offices.

This design incorporated the traditional four columns into the stonework at the front entrance, and around the exterior of the courthouse are eight carved medallions representing eight significant events in Callaway County history.

On March 18, 1940, a large crowd gathered to witness the dedication, presided or by State Senator W. B. Whitlow who introduced the speaker, then Senator Harry S. Truman.

In 1996, a major $2 million renovation began which refreshed its two courtrooms and moved the Callaway Prosecutor's offices up to the expanded 3rd story.

Other notable updates to the Callaway County Courthouse included adding a new hearing room on first floor in January 2011, as well as an exterior ramp and other accessibility improvements.

The Callaway County courthouse remains a multi-use county facility housing most of the other county government offices as well as the Callaway County Commission.

2022 saw continued construction on Callaway County's new Justice Center, which began late 2021.

With a projected completion date of April, 2023, this building will separate judicial functions from other county offices. The most anticipated enhancement will be having space for four courtrooms with two capable of holding jury trials. Other notable improvements are a secure sally-port for jail transport, and office space to house the Callaway County Juvenile Office within the new courthouse.

OTHER COURT PROGRAMS

Child Support Court

In 2019, Judge Kimberly Shaw started a Child Support Court in Boone County. This docket is in collaboration with the Prosecuting Attorney's office, Powerhouse Community Development Corporation, and United Community Builders. The goal of this court is to get non-custodial parents to start paying child support and working on arrearages (back owed child support), as well as working on their relationship with their children.

Of the 98 defendants who participated in 2022, the program was able to recover $338,663.26 in child support!!!

This almost doubled from the $177,541.55 recovered in 2021, which was already a massive increase from the $30,741.67 recovered in 2020.

Participants use the Fathers Committed to Families program (also available for mothers). which has a goal of 90 days from enrollment for participants to obtain a full or part-time job. Much like a Drug Court program, services such as substance abuse groups, parent education, anger management, child support guidance, employment assistance and job readiness skills, life skills, and financial management are provided.

The prosecuting attorney's office decides whether a case is filed in this court, verses a criminal case being filed.

In 2022, 29 participants (6 females and 23 males) were referred to the Child Support Court. 11 were terminated for non-compliance and 6 defendants successfully completed the program.

Child support monies can be collected on arrearages through voluntary payments, garnishment, abandoned property, and through other legal processes such as tax intercepts, liens on cash bonds, lottery winnings, and other actions taken by the Court, the Prosecuting Attorney's Office, and Family Support Division.

Focus on Kids

Pursuant to section 452.600, RSMo, parents who are dissolving their marriage are required to attend an educational parenting program.

13th Circuit local court rules further state in a petition for dissolution of marriage or motion to modify, or in cases involving paternity or contested custody, where there is at least one child under the age of 17, both parties to the dissolution, motion, paternity or custody case shall attend Focus on Kids

– a co-parenting education class operated by the University of Missouri’s Center for Family Policy and Research.

The purpose of the Focus on Kids program is to help parents learn how to nurture and support their children through the divorce/separation process, as well as helping parents develop ways to effectively co-parent.

Due to COVID, in March, 2020, all in-class programs were put on hold and online options were made available to participants.

In December 2021, it was decided to transition to all Focus on Kids participants taking the program online, and participants would register for the program directly with the provider rather than through the Circuit Clerk’s office. This change began January 1, 2022, and has been successful.

In 2022, 388 people attended online from Boone County and 89 people attended online from Callaway County.

This is a slight decline from 2021, where 439 people attended online from Boone County and 120 from Callaway County.

Domestic Violence Docket

In 2008, grant funding was received to pay for a Domestic Assault Court Coordinator for the 13th Circuit. This employee is dedicated to the domestic violence dockets, tracks and reports on participants in evidence-based Batterer's Intervention Programs (BIP), acts as a liaison to domestic violence docket stakeholders, and assists with the processing of domestic violence cases.
